

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Fall 2009

Course # History 480-004

Instructor Friedman

You were really interested in the course material & the class which showed. We/I really appreciate your effort and concern. I didn't have much previous knowledge of the seventies & now I feel much more educated! The way you structured the class was not overwhelming & was a good level of work for a senior seminar. Thank you for an excellent semester and good luck!

(Please continue on back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and time return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SIRS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Fall 09

Course # HST 480

Instructor Jason Friedman

The details of the course schedule, course readings and resources on the syllabus are helpful and proved a great guidance throughout the semester.

The topical arrangement throughout the course was interesting and gradually enlightening. The discussion format in class is great, thought-provoking and dynamic. The advantage of a seminar class of this one is well exploited. The only suggestion is that the question & answer part can be better promoted and guided. (But it's hard!)

The workload for this class is heavy, personally, but it's proven stimulating and helpful overall. Good job!

(Please continue on back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and time return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SIRS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester FS09

Course # 480

Instructor Dr Friedman

DR Friedman was one of my favorite professors at MSU. The material for the class was amazing and he obviously knew his stuff. He was very willing to talk after class & in his office hours. I liked how his class was set up. He was extremely organized. Dr Friedman was very relatable. I will be recommending him to anyone taking a course in HIST.

(Please continue on back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and time return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SIRS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Fall 2009

Course # HST 480 - 004

Instructor Friedman

Thank you for an enjoyable course, the perspective drawn from the 1970's really showed me a new way to think about it as a decade. I enjoyed the books, although the readings were consuming

(Please continue on back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and time return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SIRS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Fall '09

Course # 480 sec 4

Instructor Friedman

The class's content was very interesting, the way it was presented in a very accessible and engaging. Dr. Friedman was ~~was~~ always receptive to the student's questions and points of view. The course load I felt was appropriate for the level, and Dr. Friedman is dedicated to the course and teaching. Thank you Dr. Friedman for the great semester!

(Please continue on back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and time return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SIRS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester F 09

Course # HST 480 sec. 4

Instructor Friedman

Really enjoyed the class and the information. The readings seemed overwhelming at first but once you got into a routine it was easy to handle along with the writing assignments. The essay of choice was an enjoyment because I chose a fun and exciting topic to research. Dr. Friedman was very informed and knowledgeable on the 70's politics.

The class was small and intimate and you felt like you could really open up and say your opinion. One suggestion is that some of the readings were too long and some felt redundant but there was a vast array of topics to discuss, not just political ones.

(Please continue on back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and time return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SIRS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Fall 2009

Course # 480

Instructor Jason Friedman

This has been my second semester under the tutelage of Professor Friedman and I must say he continues to exemplify the traits of professionalism and fairness in his teaching. I enjoyed his methods of teaching history and would undoubtedly take part in any future courses he administers.

(Please continue on back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and time return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SIRS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.