

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring 09

Course # HST203

Instructor Jason Friedman

-this course was the first history class I've taken in college, but it was by far the most interesting history class I've ever taken. I learned the most from this class than any other class this semester. Jason's notes were extremely organized and easy to understand as well as interesting. Instead of just talking about dates, facts and presidents, he discussed the social aspects of history which had more of an impact on me. he is an excellent speaker and instructor!!

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring 2009

Course # HST 203

Instructor Jason Friedman

Jason Friedman was a great teacher and I thoroughly enjoyed the class, both as an intellectual challenge and an interesting course. Jason would always be sure, if someone had a question, to answer their question fully and to the best of his ability, he always knew the answers and would be sure to explain them well. He also had a great attitude when teaching, and inspired us to learn, and listen. It also really helped that he would recap the previous lecture the next day in class. I really enjoyed the class and I think Jason does a great job teaching the material efficiently and interestingly.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring 2009 Course # HST 203 Instructor Jason Friedman

Jason was a very enthusiastic and knowledgeable lecturer. I feel that I gained a wonderful understanding of American history. The class was organized very well and all questions were answered in a clear manner. It is clear that Jason cares a lot about this topic and did an excellent job passing information on to his students. Thank you for a wonderful semester!

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester SS09 Course # HST 203 Instructor Jason Friedman

Jason was one of the best lecturers I have had in 3 years at MSU. He is very intellectual about all of U.S. history and I wish he had more time to go over more content since he makes interesting arguments as well as interesting comments during lecture. He never diverts from US History content and instead only gives more insight into US History than he sadly has time for. The readings matched the lectures quite well. He made a good and interesting selection that were for the most part interesting - and online! (Great Cost!) He always tried to get discussions going about different topics which was interesting. He always answered questions thoroughly.

Overall, Jason was a great lecturer who always knew how to stay on task and on time and my only suggestion for him is SLOWDOWN!
He has a ton of material to cover and the MSU can talk fast!

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring '09 Course # HST 203 Instructor Jason Freidman

I found this course to be very interesting. I usually have no interest at all in history, but Jason's teaching and presentation style allowed me to actually enjoy the course. A good amount of information and events were covered. The lectures were a little fast-paced sometimes but, overall, I really enjoyed this class.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring 09 Course # HST 203 Instructor Friedman

Jason is an excellent instructor. He is passionate about this subject matter. He also was able to make history interesting by incorporating facts with pop culture of that time. I really enjoyed this class and would definitely take another class with professor Friedman.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester SS 09

Course # 203

Instructor Jason Friedman

I really enjoyed this class. Jason is a great teacher and really taught me a lot about American history. I thoroughly enjoyed coming to class ~~at~~ every week. I really have no complaints about the course or the content of the course. It was a fast paced class that held my attention and focus every day and I truly believe this was one of my favorite classes this year.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester SS 09

Course # HST 203

Instructor Jason Friedman

I truly enjoyed this class. I felt it was greatly organized. Jason really helped me enjoy and understand our nation's history. I found his lectures to be enjoyable and informative. There were times when I felt as though there was a bit too much reading. But the writing assignments really helped me to pull it all together. He gave ample opportunity in and out of class to discuss whatever we needed.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring 09 Course # HST 203 Instructor Friedman

I really enjoyed this course. I can honestly say it has been one of my favorites here at MSU. I thought the lectures were always interesting and had a lot of diverse information to keep us students interested. It was very obvious to me that Jason knows a lot about and loves American History and it is nice to take a class with a professor who actually enjoys what they're doing.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Sp09 Course # HST203 Instructor Jason Friedman

Everything was great this semester. He touched on a lot of different ideas and his powerpoints were very interesting.

He has great enthusiasm with his lectures and truly cares about his students. He was very good about allowing us to ask questions.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring '09 Course # 203 Instructor Friedman

This class was very enjoyable. I am very interested in history and Jason did a great job at presenting it. I thought he picked the most important topics of the 20th century, along with interesting ones. I usually despise lectures but I never had a problem with not wanting to show up to this class.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester SS09

Course # HST 203

Instructor Friedman

- Always deeply explained every lecture
- Gave examples in more than one way in case we didn't understand it.
- Always asked if we understood and answered all of our questions
- Lecture powerpoints were very straight forward
- Reading assignments helped understand lectures.
- NO changes necessary

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester SS09 Course # HST 203 Instructor Friedman

I thought that every lecture was beautifully organized and very easy to follow. Everything was very applicable to the course and I had new perspectives introduced to me almost everyday. Each lecture was very intriguing, and he has a strong enthusiasm for his work.
Give him a raise. Really.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester SS09 Course # HST 203 Instructor Jason Friedman

Jason was very engaging and presented American history in a way that made me relate it to my own life. I liked that he also completed history through to present day because I had never been introduced to ~~present~~ present day topics from a historians perspective.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring 09 Course # HST 203 Instructor Jason Friedman

I really enjoyed this class! Mr. Friedman was a really good speaker... so much so that I actually felt excited to get up early and come to class. He did a great job of making lecture interesting and funny. Sections really helped with my understanding of the course material. I would recommend this class to anyone, especially with Jason as their professor.

Only negative: readings were sometimes ridiculous. Often over 30 pages with 5 or more due each week.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring 2009

Course # HST 203

Instructor Jason Friedman

→ I found this class really interesting, the readings were somewhat intensive, but really helpful. I was really glad to be in a American history course that actually made it to the present day, + I appreciated the broad overview on many more modern topics that I didn't know much about. Great prof!

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.

Department of History
Course Evaluation Form

The History Faculty takes seriously student evaluations of its courses. Evaluations help instructors think about their teaching and are also part of departmental review of faculty performances. Please respond to the following concerns about this course: intellectual content, receptivity of instructor to student expression, course organization, lectures, assigned readings, writing assignments, opportunity for questions, opportunity for class discussion (if it was an important part of class), instructor's interest in teaching, changes you might suggest, and/or any matters of interest to you. Please use the reverse side of the page if needed. Evaluations will be collected by a teaching assistant or student in your class and taken directly to the History Department at the end of the class period on which they are filled out. Evaluation forms will be given to faculty members after final grades have been posted.

Semester Spring '09

Course # 203

Instructor Jason Friedman

I really enjoyed this class! The readings were manageable and related to lecture well. The pace of the class was very well mapped out and the essays were spaced apart nicely.

(Please continue on Back if needed)

The Michigan State University Code of Teaching Responsibility holds all instructors to certain obligations with respect to, e.g., course content consistent with approved descriptions, timely statement of course objectives and grading criteria, regular class attendance, published office hours, and timely return of examinations and term papers. This Code is printed in full in the Schedule of Courses and Academic Handbook. It includes specifics about complaint procedures available to students who believe that their instructors have violated the Code.

It is the policy of Michigan State University to keep faculty members' SIRS ratings confidential to the extent possible. However, certain SORS ratings may be subject to disclosure under state or federal law.